- the transaction is concluded in a timely manner and no unforeseen complication arise
- all parties to the transaction are co-operative and there is no unreasonable delay from third parties providing documentation
- no indemnity policies are required. Additional costs may apply if indemnity policies are required.

Where additional work becomes necessary we shall discuss and agree with you any proposed increase in the level of our fees prior to incurring the same.

Timescales for residential conveyancing

How long it will take from your offer being accepted until you can move will depend on a number of factors. The average process takes between 6 - 12 weeks.

It can be quicker or slower, depending on the parties in the chain. For example, if you are a first time buyer, purchasing a new build property with a mortgage in principle, it could take about 4 weeks. However, if you are buying a leasehold property that requires an extension of the lease, this can take significantly longer, between 6 and 12 months. In such a situation additional charges would apply.

Key stages of residential conveyancing

The initial part of conveyancing begins once a seller and a buyer agree a price for the sale/purchase of a property. If there is an agent acting for the seller, they will send to both parties and their legal representatives the notification of sale. These set out the agreed price, any agreed terms of the sale and the details of the seller and the buyer and their legal representatives.

The legal representatives will then write to their clients with their terms and conditions. They will also request evidence of ID and possibly request monies on account. The seller will be asked to provide information about the property on a number of forms.

The seller's legal representative will prepare a Contract pack which includes the legal title, a draft Contract and the forms completed by the seller. The buyer's legal representative will check the title, request searches and raise enquiries with the seller's legal representative.

Where a buyer is taking out mortgage finance the transaction cannot proceed until the lender has issued the mortgage offer to the buyer's legal representative. On receipt of the mortgage offer the buyer's legal representative will check the terms of the mortgage offer and raise any queries as required.

Both legal representatives will report to their client on the detail of the transaction and the papers will be signed.

Once all parties have signed the Contract and other relevant papers the transaction can move to exchange of contracts. On exchange of contracts the matter becomes legally binding and a date is fixed for the sale/purchase to take place. A deposit for the property is normally payable by the buyer at this stage. The date that is agreed for completion is called the completion date, and is the day on which the buyer pays for the property and the seller moves out.

The buyer's legal representative will notify the Revenue of the transaction, and submit the necessary Revenue return, together with payment of any stamp duty. They will then arrange for registration of the buyer and their lender's interest in the property at the Land Registry.
